

HEHE 5000 Foundations of Health Humanities

Dr. Tess Jones

Tuesdays, 6:00 – 8:50 PM

On-line Seminar

This course introduces learners to the rich field of the health humanities. Taking a topical approach, we will examine the relationships among health, medicine, and society through a variety of humanities disciplines. Learners will develop historical, literary, philosophical, and rhetorical understandings of medicine and health, paying particular attention to power relationships and categories of difference, as well as explore the wealth of imaginative materials that represent the human experience of illness, suffering, disability and death.
