

A woman of extraordinary dedication and generosity, Carol Gossard sought to improve life for all Coloradans for over five decades. She worked tirelessly for the state's leading cultural organizations and was equally committed to the cause of higher education. She was a generous donor and supporter of the University of Colorado and contributed her leadership and vision to the Center for Bioethics and Humanities as Chair of the Advisory Board, advancing efforts to promote ethical and humane health care and making the Fulginiti Pavilion for Bioethics and Humanities a reality.

A woman of extraordinary dedication and generosity, Carol Gossard sought to improve life for all Coloradans for over five decades. She worked tirelessly for the state's leading cultural organizations and was equally committed to the cause of higher education. She was a generous donor and supporter of the University of Colorado and contributed her leadership and vision to the Center for Bioethics and Humanities as Chair of the Advisory Board, advancing efforts to promote ethical and humane health care and making the Fulginiti Pavilion for Bioethics and Humanities a reality.