Gifts-in-kind (GIKs) are charitable contributions of tangible or intangible personal property that are not gifts of cash or stock. GIKs provide significant resources for the CU Anschutz Medical Campus. CU Gift Planning, which administers the acceptance of GIKs across all CU campuses, has streamlined the GIK approval process, making accepting these gifts as simple as possible.

The following procedures are designed to 1) quickly review and approve GIKs, 2) ensure that these GIKs and any agreements align with CU policies, 3) record the GIK to provide solid documentation and record-keeping, and 4) provide the framework for future stewardship and recognition of GIK donors.

Acceptance Policies:

1. The CU Anschutz Medical Campus accepts the following types of GIKs, and all accepted GIKs must support the mission of the Campus, School or College:
   - Tangible personal property
   - Intangible personal property such as intellectual property, patents, etc.
   - Services such as consulting, editing, and translating
   - Food, beverage and room rental paid for by a donor for a University event
2. All GIKs must be approved by CU Gift Planning prior to acceptance.
3. GIKs valued at $100,000 or more must be approved by the senior financial officer at the School, College, or Campus level.
4. GIKs with written agreements requiring a University signature, including sponsorship agreements, must be submitted to CU Gift Planning for review and approval by the appropriate campus official.
5. GIK donors are required to provide a substantiated estimate of the value of the donated GIK.
6. Generally, CU does not accept GIKs for the sole purpose of selling the contributed item(s). GIKs valued at above $25,000 or real estate valued at above $150,000 would be considered if approved by CU Gift Planning and relevant CU partners.
Gift-in-Kind Procedures:

1. When a GIK is offered, determine if it will advance CU’s mission. If it does not, please politely decline it. If you are unsure, contact CU Gift Planning at GIK@cu.edu.

2. If the GIK does advance CU’s mission, complete a GIK Acceptance Form and send to GIK@cu.edu. Please do not accept any GIK items or sign any documents before the gift is reviewed and approved.

3. If the donor requests CU’s signature on a document or agreement that they provide, please submit these documents along with the GIK Acceptance Form. CU Gift Planning will coordinate review and editing of any agreements.

4. Once approved, the GIK Acceptance Form will be signed by CU Gift Planning and sent back to the department for the organizational unit's authorizing signature. For GIK of $100,000 or more, the authorizing signature must be the senior financial officer at the School, College, or Campus level. For GIK under $100,000, the authorizing signature must be a senior financial officer at the unit level.

5. Approved accompanying documents, like sponsorship or gift agreements, will also be returned with instructions for who from CU should sign each agreement. Most often, this will be the participating lead faculty member.

6. Once the GIK is received, please return the fully-executed GIK Acceptance Form and all accompanying documents to GIK@cu.edu. The gift will be recorded by CU Gift Planning and an acknowledgment will be sent to the benefactor/contributor of the GIK. Per IRS guidelines, GIK acknowledgments do not include the stated dollar value of the GIK.

7. If the benefactor requests CU’s signature on an IRS Form 8283, please submit this paperwork to GIK@cu.edu. Please do not sign.

Artwork
Generally, CU does not accept gifts of artwork for display, although exceptions are made for museum/gallery collections or valuable items that can be sold to advance the mission of the University. CU has very limited resources for maintenance and conservation costs. If you are offered a gift of artwork, please contact GIK@cu.edu to discuss the situation before making any commitment to the donor.
